

Introduction

Health and wellbeing has become an important strategic consideration for businesses, with multiple reports concluding that an organisation that is healthy and well is more likely to be productive, innovative and competitive.

This new IOSH approved course will provide managers with the tools and techniques to improve health and wellbeing throughout their organisation, delivering increased productivity due to fewer hours being lost through ill-health and absence from work.

In turn this will result in an enhanced reputation within your company's sector, increasing business opportunities.

Who is the course for?

The course is designed for those in a Manager or Supervisory role or responsible for managing risk and resources.
